FOREIGN-BORN RECRUITMENT OF REGISTERED NURSES AND ALLIED HEALTH WORKERS

Live Virtual Webinar
March 9, 2022
10 - 11:30 a.m.

PROGRAM OVERVIEW
The shortage of Registered Nurses (RNs) in the U.S. continues to grow as we approach the third year of a global pandemic. With more than half a million RNs anticipated to retire by 2022, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statics projects the need for 1.1 million new RNs for workforce expansion and replacement of retirees.

As hospitals explore solutions to workforce shortages, interest in international recruitment has surfaced as a promising strategy to strengthen health care ranks. HASC is committed to addressing factors that constrain the local health care workforce and the potential benefits of recruiting foreign-born workers to help widen the talent pool. International recruitment has its advantages; however, it is not without specific challenges that each hospital and health system must carefully consider.
